Required Classroom Materials:	Supplies: Computer, doc cam, chart paper, markers, pencil, notes outline, History Smashers: Pearl Harbor by Kate Messner p. 115-130, My Lost Freedom: A Japanese American World War II Story by George Takei, picture from https://www.archives.gov/news/topics/japanese-american-internment
Classroom Environment:	Room Arrangement: Chairs in 3 rows, pairs of 2 students, small groups of 3-4 students Teacher: Interactive Board, Doc camera
Differentiation and Adaptations:	Depending on the students:  - Students will be given a printed Notice & Wonder Chart to write in. As well as a cause and effect chart, instead of writing their own notes.  - Students will be assigned a reading passage based on their ability levels.

- Teachers will read the introduction and discuss with students while they focus more on reading the "graphic novel" section of the text.

- Before reading, students will be given a "focus question". How did Pearl Harbor specifically affect Japanese Americans? Identify the small changes that occurred after the attack that led to the incarceration of innocent Americans.  15 min.  Modified Jigsaw Method:  - After the read through students will be placed in small groups of 3- 4 students to discuss and document (on a class anchor chart) the cause and effects that were found in their section, specifically how	Lesson Sequence/Procedures
- The students will be presented the above photograph to scan and evaluate. They will write down a minimum of 3 things that they notice and 3 things that sparked their curiosity.  - After the initial look, the teacher will inform the students that this occurred after the attack on Pearl Harbor.  - Students will then take a "second look" to see if it changes their "wonder".  - Students will be assigned a section of History Smashers: Pearl Harbor to read independently: 115-119, 120-122, 123-126, 126-128  - Before reading, students will be given a "focus question". 	- Students will share their findings/anchor charts as a group to the class. The students who did not read that section are responsible for writing down the cause and effects of how Japanese Americans were affected.
5 min.	Wrap Up - 5 W's
	- Students will quickly explain the who, what, where, when, and whys of the lesson.
Extra Time:	If students finish early, they can read My Lost Freedom by George Takei.
	They can then compare his personal story of living in the internment camps to what they have learned in the History Smashers book.

A	After the lease of death will identify the F W's of hear Francisco Code.
Assessments:	After the lesson, students will identify the 5 W's of how Executive Order 9066 impacted the Japanese-American people. As a class, they will create an anchor chart that shows what they've learned from their reading section.
	They will receive verbal feedback while working within their group as well as after they share their findings with the class, as well as receive feedback on their
	5 W's after they turn them in.
Learning Extensions:	Students could make connections to other groups of people who were affected in WWII, such as the Jews in Europe and African Americans in the U.S. military.
	Students could also make connections to racism and anti-immigration beliefs in the early 1900s and today.
